Accounts used: Admin michael.saraza@gmail.com / admin123 · Tenants use their email with tenant123 (e.g. jose.ramirez@gmail.com).

How the tests were run: each case was executed by an automated script (Playwright) that drives the real user interface, in the order listed, in headless Chrome and Edge. The tests used a separate copy of the demo database, so the live saraza_apartment database was not changed. A fresh import ran before each browser, and again before TC38, TC42 and TC49. Phone tests used a 390 × 844 px touch screen.

Dated data: the demo data is dated around 8 October 2026 and the tests ran on 7 November, so November rent and late fees were already on the books. TC20 therefore checks the pre-filled outstanding amount rather than the fixed ₱6,500 used in the October report. TC45 adds a charge to test credit, because the clock cannot be moved forward to the next month's rent.

Why the dashboard did not always reflect a payment

Cause	Fix	Tested by
The dashboard only loaded its figures once, when the page opened.	It now checks for changes every 15 seconds and when you return to the tab, and redraws without a reload.	TC38, TC39, TC40
The browser Back button brought back the old page with its old figures.	A restored page now fetches current figures straight away.	TC41
Balances included utility charges that tenants cannot see or pay in the portal (₱32,120 across 19 charges in the current data), so a tenant who paid everything visible still showed as owing.	Unpaid utility charges no longer count toward balances, reports or new payments. The rows are kept in the database.	TC44
Money overpaid or paid in advance was recorded, but never used, so later charges showed as overdue.	Leftover money now pays later charges automatically, and cannot be spent twice.	TC45
A ₱200 late fee was added while an on-time payment waited for confirmation, leaving a balance after it was confirmed.	No late fee is added while a payment for that rent is pending. If it is rejected, the fee applies at the next load.	TC42
Confirming a payment dated in an earlier month left "Income this month" unchanged, with no explanation.	Totals still follow the date paid, so they match the reports. The message and the Income card now say so.	TC43
Recent payments was sorted by date paid, so a backdated payment could miss the top 5.	It is now sorted by when the payment was last recorded or confirmed.	TC43, TC46
Payments could be dated in the future, which kept them out of this month's totals.	Future dates are now refused, for admins and tenants.	TC47

New tests on the code before and after the fix

To confirm these tests can detect the problems, TC38–TC47 were also run in Chrome against the original code. All 10 failed there and pass on the fixed code. TC48 and TC49 are checks on auto sign-out and tenant accounts, not on these bugs, so they were not part of this comparison.

Display bug: a maintenance request sent after noon reads "Sent -1 days ago" until the next day (UI.relative in ui.js compares it with today at midnight). No test case checks this text, so it does not affect the results above.

Late fees already on file: the live database has ₱200 October late fees for Marites Reyes and Ricardo Navarro, added on 17 October while their payments were pending. The fix prevents new ones but does not remove these; they can be waived under Renter Information.
